Delivering The Goods

Hon. C. D. Howe says production of war materials has reached the point where a complete infantry division can be equipped in six weeks, perhaps in five. That is, if the equipment were used to outfit Canadian troops. But a large part of the output is going to Britain, some to the United States, and some is to be sent to Russia. In all these theatres the need for munitions is urgent and unlimited, greater immediately than the need for food. It is rapidly Canada's fighting forces overseas can be built up will therefore have to be decided in the light of the demand for munitions for our allies.

In Russia and Britain there are from twelve to fourteen million men under arms, and in China many millions can be armed and used. The first consideration is to keep these men supplied with machinery, ammunition and food; even at the expense of extending our active army overseas less rapidly than would otherwise be done. They can hold the enemy and wait until we get the "tools," but twice their number could not do it without the tools. It is good news therefore that Canada's production program is being accelerated according to schedule, in some branches away ahead of schedule.

Berlin's Tum

With the lengthening nights, Berlin is coming in for its promised share of attention from the bombers of the R.A.F., the program varied by equally unvaried visits of Russian bombers. Life in the Nazi capital is thus taking on a new interest, and Berliners are getting a still more accurate idea of the worth of the Goering promise that they would be protected from the misery he imposed upon the residents of London a year ago. As they meditate in their underground shelters the disillusioned wards of the bemuddled Herman may pass the time by wondering whether the raiders come from the west or the east.

One thing they do not have to do any guessing about—whether the bombs are doing damage. Whoever drops it, a bomb always wrecks something, if only the peace of the forest. Herr Goebbels may tell the world the raids are not important, but nobody believes him, least of all the Berliners. They know better. The factories and railway yards are being systematically demolished. They know also that what they are enduring now is only a forerunner of what is in store for them. If the present is unpleasant, the future can only be depressing. Berlin is in for a bad time before the winter ends.

A Factual Size-Up

The Japan News Week, which is said to sometimes pass through the office at Tokyo, publishes some candid comment on the position and prospects of the Axis campaign. The paper, which is a forerunner of the world domination, it has definitely lost momentum. It tells Herr Hitler that he has been shown to be fallible, that his air offensive against England is a failure, and that his ground offensive against Russia has got nowhere. A year from now, the News Week contends, the Axis powers will be in a state of defeat, and the world of peace.

This is strange language to be used by any Japanese newspaper, a remarkable language for one of semi-official standing. It sounds like an undisciplined and authoritative hint to the reader that, since he is going to lose the war, it does not make sense for him to keep urging Japan to throw herself into the fight and she will lose.

That interpretation is in keeping with the fact that United States tanks are not molested by carrying cargoes of gasoline through Japanese waters to Vladivostok, to be used by Russia in bringing about the Axis defeat which the News Week predicts.

For what they are worth, both the comment and the unmoderated passage of the oil-ships suggest that the realistic members of Japan's war directorate are putting brakes on the neck-or-nothing policies of their colleagues.

He Will Know What To Do

Berlin admits that one of its submarines fired a couple of torpedoes at the destroyer of "unknown name" in the North Atlantic on Friday. As the attack took place in broad daylight, and the submarine periscope was visible, this pretence that the nationality of the Greer was unknown can only be supported on a claim that the ship was color blind and could not distinguish the flag the destroyer was flying, and the distinctive markings on the hull. And since Berlin knows so much about the occurrence, either it must have ordered the attack to be made or the submarine must have survived to wireless in a report.

The important point, however, is this official declaration that any warship of any country that appears in the North Atlantic is to be torpedoes if a U.S. U-boat can get within range of it. Nationality does not matter. That the nationality of the Greer was "unknown" is the excuse offered for the attack. All the sub-commanders of the Greer were required to know was that the destroyer was not an Axis boat. Knowing this, it was warranted, according to Berlin, in trying to sink it.

United States warships flying between home ports and Iceland or any other point in the eastern half of the sea are thus proclaimed to be enemy ships and liable to attack; and the same goes for warships of any other non-Axis country.

This relieves Washington of any need to lay down rules of procedure. Instead, it leaves Hubert Wilkins trying to get to the North Pole in one of them.

It is odd to recall that ten years ago the world was interested in submarines only because of the submarine war. Now, trying to get to the North Pole in one of them.

The revenue department at Ottawa announces that it collected $100,000,000 during August in customs, excise and income taxes. This is double the amount collected in August of 1940. For once the public will feel no resentment at the news that they are being taxed twice as heavily as in 1940. The more revenue is collected, the less money has to be borrowed.

Because some unknown person, presumably a Frenchman, shot a French turn-out policeman at Paris, Frenchmen who were being held as "hostages." It was not even claimed this had any element of justice, for the men in question had no part in the crime for which they were punished. Revenge and terrorism were the motives of the official trip murderer, and were openly and officially admitted as motives. Such is the Nazi "new order."

Americas Low Morale

Confusion Of Mind Accidental
And Almost Certainly Temporary

By WALTER LIPPMANN

During this summer the country has been passing through a mental disturbance which for want of a better name we are calling a state of low morale. Marked by considerable discontent in the army and the navy, it culminated in the vote of the House of Representatives on the extension of army service. This vote reflected a division of opinion as to whether the dangers menacing the country were in fact great enough to justify the sacrifices asked of the people.

This is a serious matter. But what is the situation now? I believe, now that the summer has been, accidental and almost certainly temporary.

W. Lippmann says. The crisis in morale is a serious matter. But what is the situation now? I believe, now that the summer has been, accidental and almost certainly temporary.

These mental disturbances have all appeared among Americans of the sense of danger and urgency, the British tendency to overreact, the Japanese sense of hope and of the continent, the German sense of the Japanese and the forebodings of the German.

These states of mind coincide with, and almost certainly are the direct result of, the momentous but unexpected turn which the war has taken: the fact that almost everybody's preconception of the war was wrong; the fact that Russia has remained neutral and has not even been surprised. This new and sudden turn of the war relieved the immediate pressure on Britain and the United States to advance into the South Atlantic. It completed the blockade and encircled Germany, and it demonstrated, I believe, that the purpose of the war was to keep the peace of the world.

Under New Management For The Duration

Need every trained and every half-trained soldier to train the American troops from Iceland and Alaska to the Philippines, Panama and the Atlantic island. That was why the army wanted to hold the men in service, that was why it wanted the western hemisphere limitation removed.

That the general staff was not preparing an army to invade Europe was evident to all, except the ignorant opposition, from the fact that they were training of a small army for any such adventure. They were thinking of our outposts, those we have and those we might in the defense be compelled to occupy if Hitler attacked Russia and then turned west, and if Japan broke loose.

No Serious Opposition
In the first weeks of July there was no serious opposition to the army's program, at least as regards the extension of service. The general belief that Russia was already defeated made it seem self-evident that the American army must be kept intact at its maximum strength in trained men. It was not until the beginning of August when the Russian resistance began to seem possible that the old-guard Regulars began to think it safe to take a look at the Administration on a measure which, since it called for serious sacrifice by millions of men and their families, was certainly made to order for any demagogic politician to keep the people in a state of alarm.

The Hoover-Landon-old guard Republicans became grumpy, but only after the amazing resistance of the Russians at Smolensk. The opposition failed to oppose the advice of the military, and the military was not a major matter of national defense only that it transpired in August that the army had in early July undertaken the strength of the Russian army and of the Russian regime. This is the time the bill came to a vote the opposition was able to make a plausible argument that the military position was not so immediately and desperately critical as the army had said it was. They were able to make a political gamble on the probability, by no means a certainty in August or even today, that the military would not immediately and desperately critical as the army had said it was.

The political opposition was not a campaign and will keep the bulk of Hitler's forces engaged for some time to come.

Crisis In Morale
The crisis in morale began in the summer was the result on the one hand of surprise—Hitler's attack on Russia and Russia's unexpected resistance—and on the other hand of circumstance—that the military position was not so immediately and desperately critical as the army had said it was. They were able to make a political gamble on the probability, by no means a certainty in August or even today, that the military would not immediately and desperately critical as the army had said it was.

ADMINISTRATOR ISSUES STATEMENT HERE

Early Action For Rental Control Declared Necessary

Some Edmonton Boosts

Are Near Profiteering Justice Martin States

While many responsible owners and agents in Edmonton had not taken advantage of the shortage of housing, there were landlords who demanded rental increases, some of whom, to put it mildly, bordered on profiteering. Mr. Justice W. M. Martin, Ottawa, rental administrator under the War Time Prices and Trade Board, said here. He expressed the opinion that "in order to control the situation, some action is necessary and at an early date."

Joins Staff

Mr. Justice Martin arrived in Edmonton Saturday morning to confer with civic officials and organizations interested in rental control. He met representatives of five organizations here, three of which favored and two opposed the establishing of Edmonton as a rental control area.

Organizations meeting Mr. Justice Martin were: The Local Council of Women, the Trades and Labor Council, the Canadian Labor Party, whose delegates made representations favoring the establishing of rental control, and the Taxpayers' Protective Association and the Edmonton Real Estate Association, opposing.

LABORING MAN'S RENT

Mr. Justice Martin said that, while interested in seeing that rentals of all houses occupied by laboring men were kept at a reasonable level, the rental control board was especially interested in the rents paid by the laboring man, the lower salaried class and by the families of the laboring man.

5 New Cases Polio Occur: 117 Is Total

Infantile paralysis cases in this province were increased by five over the week-end to bring the total to 117. It was announced Monday by the provincial health board. Two new cases of sleeping sickness followed the total to 52.

In view of the continued increase in the number of infantile cases there is some apprehension as to whether schools will open next Monday, Sept. 15. However, a meeting will be held Wednesday to meet whether they will open on Sept. 15 whether a further delay will take place.

At present the health board order precludes assemblies of children under 18 years. This prevents schools opening and children playing together.

Next week the Edmonton police force will abandon their traditional blue uniforms for a more comfortable one, if present plans of the city commissioners are ratified by the city council.

It is likely the uniform will also be adopted by other civic departments.

Man Held On

Assault Count After Attack

Robert Ryan, river dugout dweller, is in the general hospital, suffering from a deep cut in the forehead, while city police hold Alex. McDonald on a charge of assault.

McDonald was arrested after a struggle with Ryan, who was struck with an axe. The incident is said to have occurred at the river bank dugout residence of Ryan and a man named Charles Johnson, about three miles from Ryan.

Ryan walked to the office of Dr. J. H. Conroy, and the latter had him taken to hospital. His condition is said by police to be fairly serious.

Alex. McDonald was brought to the city police station Sunday afternoon and charged with assault, after Constables McMurray and Lytle replied to a call for help from Mr. Long, living at 1803 Saskatchewan Drive. The latter telephoned there was trouble at his river bank near the Mayfair Club.

McDonald pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting Charles Johnson and was remanded for sentence until Sunday 12 noon in the city court.

On the charge of assaulting Ryan, accused entered no plea, and this hearing was also set until Sept. 12.

REPORTS ASSAULT

When police arrived they found a man named Charles Johnson, with a bad bruise on the bridge of his nose, who stated that he had been assaulted earlier in the day.

Johnson, who lives at 1803 Saskatchewan Drive, said that he and Ryan lived in a dugout on the side of the river bank that bears Johnson's name.

Johnson accused came to their place, Ryan and the two men fought. Ryan spoke and about an hour later struck Johnson in the face with his fist without the accused's consent.

Then, according to Johnson, McDonald came and struck Ryan a moment later with an axe. Ryan then received a blow on the forehead with the axe, Johnson claimed.

GOES FOR DOCTOR

When police arrived Ryan had a head injury and was taken to hospital for a doctor to dress his wound.

Arising out of a question by Ald. L. L. L. Brown, M.P., E.D., asking for a survey of the cost of providing summer uniforms for the police, fire and street railway departments, the city commissioners.

Alberta Will Lead In Hogs Official Says

Predictions that Alberta will become the premier hog producing province of Canada within the next few months was made by E. W. Brundage, Calgary, secretary of the Alberta Federation of Agriculture, when he passed through Edmonton Sunday.

They will outline Alberta's position in view of the light out and barley crops raised in the province this season.

Mr. Brundage, with L. Hutchinson, Danube, president of the Federation, will represent Alberta at the annual meeting of the National Association of Farmers, which is being held in Regina, Saskatchewan, this week.

Mr. Brundage said that the province was striving to meet the demand for hogs by increasing their production of hogs. He predicted that the answer to this need was in the province being the premier hog producing province of Canada within a very few months.

Milk Essential Defence Of Family Health

What To Do

In the modern diet milk plays a major part. Every woman responsible for the defense of her family's health should understand the following facts about milk and milk products. They have been established by Mary Taylor, editor of Consumer Digest, published by the Department of Agriculture.

"Several essential vitamins are present in white milk. It contains vitamin A and riboflavin (vitamin B₂) in important amounts. The amount of vitamin A in whole milk varies with the cow's feed, and it is therefore higher when the cows are in green pastures—where they can winter range is reinforced with alfalfa containing the vitamin. In general, the milk of cows in green pastures has a value that is winter-produced milk.

"The natural vitamin D content of milk is very low. It is added to milk in the form of a synthetic vitamin D₂ or D₃ which gives it a value that is comparable to the value of milk which has been naturally fortified with vitamin D by exposure to sunlight. This synthetic vitamin D₂ or D₃ is added to milk in the form of a synthetic vitamin D₂ or D₃ which gives it a value that is comparable to the value of milk which has been naturally fortified with vitamin D by exposure to sunlight.

of whole milk, like the vitamin A and calcium in milk, but vitamin D value depends upon the cow's exposure to sunlight, the other source of active vitamin rays.

Milk contains a small amount of the B vitamins, but it is extremely small and variable source of ascorbic acid (vitamin C). Eggs and fish oils are the best sources of sweetened milk provide the vitamins A, D, and E (riboflavin), but they are made. They are preserved by heating (vaporized) and are not C.

Some of the dry milk contains practically all the vitamin content of the original milk, except the B vitamins.

Skim milk, both fresh and powdered dry, are valuable sources of calcium and vitamin D.

DINNER: Tomato juice, chopped beef and oatmeal loaf, brown gravy, parsley potatoes, carrots with parsley, jam tart, coffee, milk.

The riboflavin content of the milk occurs in whey, a by-product of cheese-making. Cheese made from whole milk provides the vitamin A and D content of the original milk. "Butter provides most of the vita-

Kansas Woman Faces Tornado To Make These Spectacular Pictures

When Mrs. Omar Shields of near Lincolnville, Kan., saw a tornado approaching the other day, did she run terror-stricken to the cyclone cellar? Hardly. She grabbed her camera, went to the front yard, and stood her ground. Result: this remarkable series of twister pictures. Below, the tail of the tornado strikes the ground, raising Highland rural school.

Twister Reaches Full Fury Mile Away.

Left, now the tornado's full force hits the town of Lincolnville, just mile away from Mrs. Shields. Storm's going all-out at this juncture and is just about as destructive as a wind can get. Below, after leveling Lincolnville, the twister comes even nearer, about a half mile, but its fury is partly spent, and Mrs. Shields goes back to her housework.

Then Breaks Up

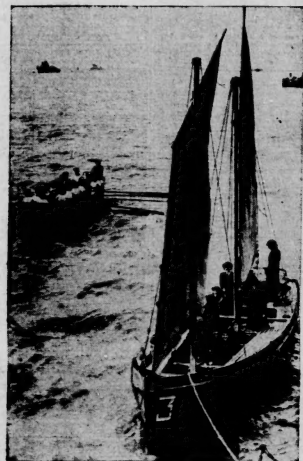

Marvin H. "Bud" Ward, 28, of Spokane, Wash., is shown with the winner's cup after he won his second National Amateur Golf championship at the Field Club in Omaha, Neb. Ward, who took the title after a 4 and 3 victory over Pat Abbott of Los Angeles, also won in 1938.

A flip of the coin finally decided a 36-hole deadlock for Wilder H. Ripley, left, of Calgary and Pasadena, Calif., and S. R. Howard, right, of Lethbridge, Alta. They tied with 74½ for the Edward Prince of Wales Cup at Banff's 12th golf tournament, played off on another 18 holes and both shot 79½. Miss Christine Cawne, of Washington, D.C., centre, tossed the coin which decided the cup in Ripley's favor. Ripley's play, incidentally, was a highlight of the Banff Springs Hotel event. He became the first player ever to break Banff's tough par in tournament play, scoring a one-under-par 70 in the quarter-final round.
